SPRING MANEUVERS ON THE POTOMAC

Without cynical abuse of relief money in the 1938 campaign there would have been no Hatch act. It was a specific remedy for a specific malady—use of public funds and jobs to perpetuate the ins and handicap the outs.

Likewise, without the forthcoming primaries and election of 1940, there would have been no incentive to widen the scope of the Hatch act to bar state employees paid partly from federal funds from political activity, the current issue.

Vote getters are skirmishing for position. They are trying to establish lines of battle and supply. The Hatch act is a handicap to some of them; to others it is an advantage. Two camps have formed.

In retaliation for Republican support of the act, including its extension to state jobholders, certain members of the majority in the senate have retaliated with an amendment limiting individual campaign contributions to $5,000. This is a spite measure.

The Republican party is threatened with loss of some of its big givers; so is the Democratic party, but thanks to the organization it has built up as the party in power it won't run short of money.

Voters, watching the mad scramble for position before the big contest starts, can reflect that it tells more about the nature of the campaign than the exalted speeches that will be made later. If the boys persist in airing the dirty linen of partisan politics, in fact, some of the speeches are going to sound mighty hypocritical.

WITHIN 10 DAYS

Both the diplomatic and military strategy of Hitler's Germany are based on the psychology of suspense. A new surprise is always imminent.

In a large extent, the same policy also is the secret of Nazi domestic power. Opposition at home, like the opposition abroad, is kept off balance by terror of what may happen next.

What happens when the possibilities of terror have been exhausted is a question for philosophers to ponder. Eventually, there must come a time when terror's victims, having experienced the worst that can be inflicted, have nothing more to fear. That time has not come yet, however.

Thus, it is being hinted in Berlin that important new "surprises" will occur within the next 10 days. While this is not a new threat, the middle of March having been designated as long ago as last January as a climax period, it has the desired effect.

Events in Finland had monopolized attention, with the effect that Germany's next move had been obscured in Russia's current move. But collapse of Finnish resistance clears the stage for a new episode. Presumably, Nazi leadership will seize the opportunity to create a new sensation.

Whether it will be military or diplomatic, or a combination of both, nobody knows. But having posted notice, it would be fatal not to put on a show. The instant Hitler is suspected of lacking a new surprise to spring, his power will begin to fade—at home and abroad.

OR CAN IT?

Best bargain in the service industries today is the $10 value in sagacity a customer can collect with a 50 cent haircut. Like cab drivers and night watchmen, barbers are keen observers.

One wonders, consequently, about an attempt by their Columbus union to freeze the price of haircuts by ordinance. Declared unconstitutional by Judge John R. King of Franklin common pleas court last week, the ordinance embodies a philosophy hard to reconcile with barbering sagacity.

It's not the 50 cent minimum on haircuts or the accompanying 25 cent minimum on shaves, those being widely accepted price standards, but the idea of setting prices by law that's puzzling. Certainly, no single group in the service industries has better reason to observe the folly of static than barbers.

If they could make their customers' hair grow twice as fast or double the customer's pride in his personal appearance their business would be twice as good. But hair can't be made to grow by passing a law.

Business can't be made better either. On the next visit to the barbershop the subject will be brought up, to see what the real truth of the matter is.

CONFIDENTIAL NOTE TO PRODIGES:

National Artist foundation's refusal to include child prodigies in its financial aid program for musical geniuses is hard to swallow, but swallow it like a good child and don't ask questions.

Perhaps 13 year old Julius Katchen of Chicago, who says he's capable of matching piano concerts with any adult, is right. Probably Norman Alexandroff, foundation director who argues a child can't speak the language of music understandably, is wrong. But it doesn't make any difference.

If grownups had to admit a child could do things as well as they can do them, the world would be turned upside down. There'd be no incentive to keep on trying. The old ziparoo would be gone out of living. Fathers and mothers would lose face with their offspring.

An occasional child prodigy is all right. It gives the old hands a chance to mutter that the poor little darling is missing all the fun of being a normal child, which is the highest destiny conceivable by human beings who weren't prodigies.

INDIA CAN WAIT

It might be a good idea for Mahatma Gandhi and Manuel Quezon to peer into each other's minds; they might see a reflection of their own thoughts.

The mahatma says in an interview that statutory independence for India can wait until the war's over; i. e., until Indians can be sure they're not kicking out the British and letting in some other empire builder. Moral independence, however, is still worth striving for.

Meanwhile, the president of the Philippines has been keeping an open mind on statutory independence too. Moral independence still is highly desirable, but if there is some way to get it without making the islands a pushover for some other empire builder Filipinos would be much happier.

In classical thought, independence is always worth the candle. It merely happens that in these troubled times independence no longer is sufficient unto itself. Having it and holding it are two different things. Jumping from the frying pan into the fire never was, never will be, good statesmanship.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, March 20

THE MOST advanced ideals and ambitious objectives are under excellent promise of fulfillment and attainment, according to strong lunar influence. It is a time for reaching toward high goals with assurance and initiative, although there may be disturbances, disruption and lack of support from expected sources. Elders or some tricky circumstances in connection with old associations may prove the testing factor.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of eventual success in attaining some very ambitious purpose and high aim in spite of stubborn opposition, sudden upsets and the want of co-operation from desired individuals. Others just as powerful and more willing may step into the gap, if efficiency, important objectives and sincerity, together with personal popularity and prestige, prove convincing.

A child born on this day may have splendid talents and ingenuity, with high aims as well as a good disposition and warm temperament, which will aid it in attracting powerful support in putting over its ambitions.

Value Of Fruit As First Course Stressed By Doctor

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Is there any scientific basis for the use of fruit as the first course of a meal?

Yes. In the first place, it has been found experimentally that fruits as a pre-meal course reduce the irritating properties of allergens in food and allow people who are sensitive to a large number of foods to get by without any response in the way of hives or asthma. Furthermore, fruits produce preliminary response on the part of the stomach with a rapid concentration of acid and pepsin, which are digestion fluid and used for the digestion of other foods.

It has also been found that fruits reduce the amount of germs in the small and large intestine.

Itching of External Ear

What is the cause and treatment of itching of the external ear?

This common condition is often called seborrheic dermatitis, which is akin to dandruff. It may be due to invasion of the skin with a special variety of streptococcus germs. Discharge from the ear in the later stages, when the discharge is almost dried up, will produce severe itching and inflammation of the ear. Impacted wax will also do the same thing. Treatment in these latter two instances is to attack the cause.

Itching for which we can find no cause is very difficult to treat and may tax the resources of the dermatologist and the ear specialist combined.

Denture Troubles

In a patient wearing an artificial denture, there is an inflammation of the palate and lower jaw. Is this due to the denture material used?

There are five causes of these conditions:

1. Residual infection.

2. Spurious-saw tooth.

Both of these conditions may be revealed by competent x-ray.

3. Mucous glands excreting a type of uric acid that literally burns the tissue. This is really similar to diaper rash in babies. Dr. Francis C. Daly, of Boston, has brought out the fact that this condition is a symptom of approaching anemia. A mouth wash of diluted vinegar as a cleansing agent for the denture is recommended as a temporary relief.

4. Filth, in connection with a denture that is not highly polished on its tissue bearing surface. Dentures should be scrubbed with a good household cleanser and a stiff brush. A dentist friend of mine tells me graphically that where one "mote picker" will, through the years, ruin a denture by this type of cleansing, ten thousand tapwater dabblers will continue to be unskissable.

5. Occlusion, the basis of all dental practice. Normally it is the first factor in a discussion of an efficient masticatory mechanism, either natural or artificial.

The material of which the denture is made is of comparatively slight consequence.

"SELF MADE GIRL" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XIII

Dora was the most irresponsible of all. She left all of the tea-room management to Gladys, and seemed to have no proprietary interest, though it was supposed to belong to her. With the highly paid positions she frequently held, she could have lived nicely in a hotel apartment of her own, but she preferred to batch it with Gladys.

Gladys bought beautifully, costly clothes, wore them a time or two, then left them hanging, spotted, in need of cleaning, in the makeshift closet.

The two boys, King and Johnny, were ambitious too. King boasted that he had a routine job in a railroad office, so that he'd have his mind to himself. Serious, eager, spectacled, he came every night when his work was over, had his dinner, then sat by the fire and read until the girls were ready to go upstairs to bed. Then he bundled himself into his overcoat, wrapped a woollen scarf around his neck and went out into the cold, to begin the long ride home to Brooklyn.

Johnny lived in Hoboken, and followed a similar procedure. He was a furniture salesman in one of the big department stores, came to Tanya's for dinner, then went to night school, or studied by the fire for an hour or two. He studied Sanskrit, Japanese flower arrangement and bookbinding. He never spoke of his work, or his parents in Hoboken. Nobody knew much about him. He just came, with his books and his portfolios, and sat.

Occasionally they clubbed together, bought gallery tickets for an opera or ballet. Often they went to lectures about art, or books, or politics. Linda envied them their knowledge of all these things that were new and foreign, and often boring to her. She wanted to be able to chatter about art exhibits and music and books the way they did. She wished she knew the rowdy songs they sang, the jingles they chanted together, the verses they quoted so glibly. She began picking up a book here or there, reading, forcing herself to concentrate. In back of her head was the growing idea that what they could teach her would help some day.

It was Gladys, the only one who had any personal ambition, who resented Linda's wide-eyed listening, her growing habit of reading.

She found more and more for her to do, and waited for the protests that didn't come. Linda didn't care. She was used to work. She began making a few suggestions about the cooking, too. "Grandma was French, you know, and I remember some of the things she used to do."

"Well! Go ahead!" Gladys would say heartily. But she didn't like it. People came to Tanya's night after night to get her good cabbage soup, her baked pork chops, her hot bread, and she didn't need any help from a youngster she'd only taken in out of the goodness of her heart.

Some of this Linda sensed, some of it was discreetly whispered by Nola. Linda began to feel uncomfortable. She'd thought she more than earned her living. Now, maybe Gladys didn't want her. Maybe nobody would ever want her. Maybe there was something about her that made people dislike her after awhile.

One day, Dora breezing in early, surprised her crying upstairs. "Don't you know nothing's worth crying about, infant?"

"I'm not crying!"

"Don't be silly. I'm not blind. Tell grandma all about it. Oh, I'm not fooling, Linda, honey. Tell me. Maybe it's something I can help about. Please tell me."

"Oh, Dora, you wouldn't understand. You have a job and money and everything. And when I came here, I thought I'd have them. And I do want to thank you and Gladys for helping me, but I try so hard and still I'm not getting anywhere, and sometimes I think I'm not pleasing Gladys."

"What do you stay for? There's nothing in it! Never will be."

"But Dora, now that I'm here, and I see how hard it is to get work, and I realize how little I thing you have to know to get a job. I've been all over town. To every store! And there isn't a chance." The first thing they ask you at the agencies is, "Can you type?"—so I'm going to learn.

"May heaven protect you," Gladys said piously.

The next day Linda rented a typewriter, and the next night she was on her way to school.

It was a winter of snow and sleet, and rain that blew in blinding, drenching sheets. To leave the warm, smoky tearoom with its sputtering candles, its glowing wood fire, and the laughter and good-natured bantering of the "regulars" who made great sport of her stenographic ambitions, and to struggle out into the night to a class, took every bit of will power that Linda had.

I just can't keep it up, she'd think despondently. It's too much. It's too hard. Anyway I'm tired tonight, and it's wet and cold outside.

And then, before she could weaken, she'd run upstairs, tear out of her full skirted peasant dress, and into her street-clothes, and go—for another night, anyway.

She was always tired, nearly always discouraged. Her mind didn't work properly. Her fingers would fall on the wrong keys of her typewriter. How do other girls learn these things? It looks so EASY! They do it—why can't I? What's the matter with me? If others can, then I MUST!

So she got through the winter, and the slushy spring and the beginning of a summer that began to be hot before spring was decently in. Now it was imperative that she earn something at once. Her original $34 had long since gone for carfare and such stern necessities as shoe repairing and stockings.

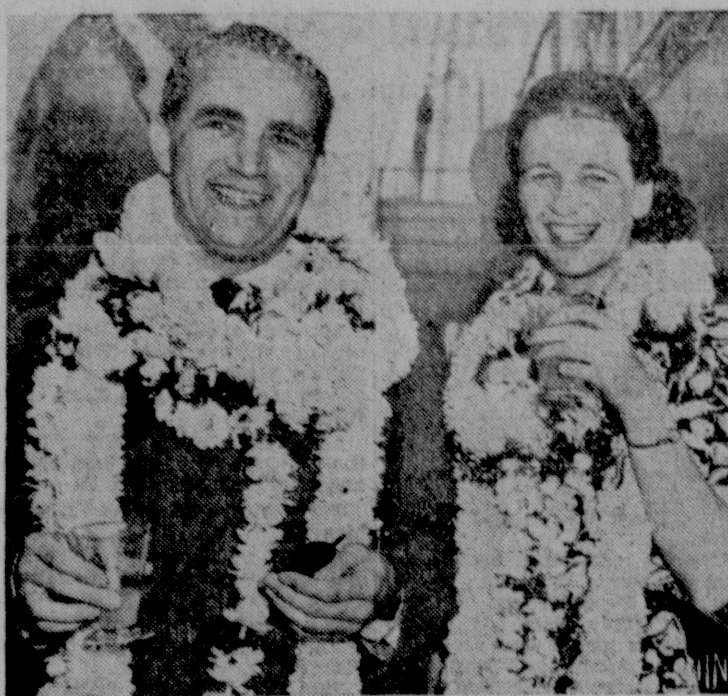

Tips were practically unheard of at Tanya's, and when she was fortunate enough to find a little job of addressing envelopes or filing in form letters, it was night work to be done downstairs in the tearoom, after Gladys and Dora had gone up to bed, for the partitions upstairs were thin and Gladys objected if she was kept awake.

Sometimes a passerby rattled the knob of the door, or tapped at the window, and Linda's blood would go cold with fear. There was no way to go through the house to their rooms upstairs. She had to come out of the basement tearoom, lock the door, unlock the house door, and then go up the dark stairs to their rooms at the back of the dim hall on the third floor. It became a nightmare, a nightly endurance test.

She didn't know why she worked so hard, why she went to a class or to the public library to study, every night in the week. Sometimes it seemed that she'd started, and now she didn't know how to stop.

She finished the first courses in shorthand and typing and began with her speed courses to study

English composition, and French. Why didn't she learn French when she had the chance, a child at home? Why did she always answer Grandma Pologne in English, and why hadn't she learned the French songs and nursery rhymes that Grandma had tried to teach her?

Sometimes, by shutting her eyes, and thinking of Grandma Pologne, as she used to look, pattering around the kitchen in her full skirts, her flat felt slippers, her little brown wrinkled face with its almost scotchless smile, she could almost hear the words again, almost remember a nearly forgotten melody.

And then she'd think how sorry Grandma would be to see her so tired and worn, and a tear or two of self pity would fall on her cheek. Sometimes she almost died of homesickness, and wishing for something safe and familiar and orderly upon which to cling. Paul and Johnny King. Nola and Gladys and Dora. . . what did they mean to her really? And what did she mean to them? NOTHING! And as for getting on in the world, and studying, and working, she had to do it in spite of them, not with their help. They didn't care about getting ahead. They didn't want to get ahead.

It hurt that nobody cared. Not even Blanche, and Claudine, her own sisters. To do them justice, they didn't know. Linda's few letters to Philadelphia were marvels of fabrication. They saw her as she wanted them to see her, part of a gay, Bohemian life. They worried, not that she worked too hard, but that she played too hard, that her friends were too gay. It never occurred to Blanche or Claudine, or to the brothers who asked about her occasionally, that she might need money. And badly as she needed it, it never occurred to her to ask.

Food and shelter she had, and sometimes King would treat to a couple of cheap theater seats, and really see one of the plays they'd read about and talked about for so long. But clothing was the great problem. Stockings. Even such things as a 10 cent box of face powder, or a lipstick became almost unattainable goals for which she struggled.

With all her worry over the future, and the heavy burden of the present work and study, she still alternately dreamed and despaired about Glenn McAllister. Sometimes out of her loneliness and need, she wrote long impassioned letters, telling of her love, begging him to say how he felt—to say something, yes or no—to let her know whether to go on hoping, or to try to forget. But some limp or angel of caution always bade her wait. In the morning she'd re-read what she'd written, blush at last night's folly, and burn the letter in Tanya's kitchen stove.

Nine Million Not Working Estimates Roosevelt Adviser

WASHINGTON, March 19.—President Roosevelt's economic advisers, it was learned today, have sent him a memorandum indicating that the nation started 1940 with from 9,000,000 to 12,000,000 unemployed.

The memorandum is a compilation of differing estimates from prominent labor statistics sources. It draws no original conclusions.

The President was told that the best unemployment figures available until the census takers check up in April are as follows:

	1939 Average	January, 1940
National Industrial Conference Board	9,100,000	9,300,000
American Federation of Labor	10,100,000	10,200,000
Congress of Industrial Org.	10,700,000	12,000,000
A Federal Economist	9,800,000	10,500,000

The economist, one whose figures are used regularly by a half dozen federal agencies, said that the higher figures for January were due partly to the business decline in that month but largely to seasonal factors which always increase unemployment in that month.

This statistician figures that an average of 2,000,000 were unemployed in 1929, with the figure rocketing to 14,000,000 in March 1933, declining to 6,250,000 in September, 1937, rising again to 10,300,000 in February, 1938, and touching temporary bottom again at 8,800,000 last October.

If the usual seasonal factors operate this year—a circumstance of which he is not sure because of the recent business decline—this economist calculates that unemployment should be down to about 9,000,000 in April.

The bureau of agricultural economics, meanwhile, forecast a spring reversal of the downturn in business activity but did not find any signs indicating a rapid improvement thereafter.

Boost Water Supply

CANTON, March 19.—With Canton shadowed by the prediction of a water shortage next summer, city council has approved preliminary legislation for drilling of a $20,000 deep well expected to increase the city supply by 5,000,000 gallons a day.

The city water commission had said a daily shortage of 4,000,000 gallons was imminent for the summer months because of low rainfall in the past two years.

Trial Is Slated

Edward Norris and Edward G. Robinson in a scene from "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet", at the State Wednesday and Thursday.

Shattering every precedent for dramatic frankness, "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet", starring Edward G. Robinson, tells the little known and highly interesting history of the discovery of salvasan treatment for syphilis. The film shows Wednesday and Thursday at the State.

The picture definitely establishes Robinson as one of the great dramatic actors of the screen. Muni's
"Zola" and "Pastor" were no better critics say, than Robinson's Dr.
Ehrlich, German scientist whose dramatic fight to save the lives of doomed men and women children and babies resulted in the discovery of a "magic bullet" which would kill microbes, just as a cartridge from a rifle kills big game.

Mission of Instruction
The film also proves what leading critics and officials of the film industry have long claimed—that motion pictures have a mission besides that of entertainment, the mission of instruction and enlightenment. It is interesting to note that not one state board of censorship has banned the film, a record never before believed possible.

Its important message is not allowed to obscure, nor is it obscured by the rich and colorful story of the German "Edison's" life and work.

Others in the fine cast are Ruth Gordon, stage star of wide reputation, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp, Maria Ouspenskaya, Donald Meek, Albert Basserman, once Germany's most beloved and honored actor,
now an exile from his native land,
Edward Norris, Harry Davenport and Henry O'Neill.

At the State for the last times tonight is "I Take This Woman" with Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamar.

Wednesday's bill at the Grand includes: "Village Barn Dance" with Don Wilson, Lulabelle and Scotty and other radio personalities, and Richard Cromwell, Doris Day and George Barber; and "Kid Nightingale" with John Payne and Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett and Ed Brophy.

agreement over Balkan affairs, as a means for paving the way to extending the axis.

Check Allied Control
Rome in discussing the historic Erenner Pass meeting also touched on the possibility of "neutralizing" Germany's Balkan flank, a project which must take Russia into prime consideration.

Such a step would be aimed at heading off Allied control in southeast Europe and assuring Germany a source of supply, principally from Roumania.

One element in the picture emerged with more clarity when a Vatican source disclosed that Germany and the Vatican are negotiating an agreement to safeguard Catholic rights in territories an-nexed by Germany.

There was talk in both London and Paris of cabinet shake-ups to bring more vigorous prosecution of the conflict and efficient home administration.

Another echo of the Finnish-Russian war was the Stockholm disclosure that Sweden had been soured by Russia that she had no territorial ambitions in Scandinavia.

Herron-Allen Duo Leads As Doubles Competition Opens In City Tenpin Tournament

Kenneth Robenstine Sets Pace In Singles With 620 Score; Willis-Armstrong Hold Second Place In Two-Man Event With 1,142

Doubles and singles firing opened in the fifth annual City Handicap Tenpin tournament at the Grate Recreation alleys last night with Ed Herron and Ray Allen setting the pace in the two-man event and Kenneth Robenstine showing the way in the individual competition.

Herron and Allen moved into the lead in the doubles with an 1,176 score, including a 222-pin handicap. Herron paced the pair into first place, hitting a 548 series on games of 215, 162 and 171. Allen contributed a 406 series to the total.

A low handicap team, Virgil Willis and Jim Armstrong, took over second place in the two-man event with an 1,142 score. Armstrong had 571 in actual pins, while Willis had 535. They received 36 free pins.

The Willis-Armstrong duo started off with a bang, hitting 461 in their first game, but failed to maintain the pace in the second and third heats. Willis hit 224 and Armstrong 225 in the first game.

Trailing Willis and Armstrong by two pins, the two-man team of Al Loudon and C. E. "Pop" Campbell turned in an 1,140 score for third place. Loudon contributed a 524 series and Campbell 490 to the team's total, which included 126 free pins.

Take Fifth Place

Other leading singles in the doubles include: W. Roach-C. Fuller, 1,109; H. Donbar-C. Collier, 1,102; and R. Myers-G. Pow, 1,098.

Robenstine, a member of the Martin Tire team in the OWL league, tacked a 135-pin handicap onto a 485 series in actual pins to take the lead in the singles with a 620 score.

Arthur Lennig of Columbiana, allowed 39 free pins, moved into second place in the singles with a 610 count. Lennig has an actual pin series of 571, combining games of 181, 201 and 189.

Third high on the opening night of the singles was a 603 score chalked by Merle (Red) White, who combined a 21-pin handicap with a 582 series in actual pins. Mervin Thomas turned in the fourth highest score, hitting 601 by adding a 39-pin handicap to 562 series in actual pins.

Other leading singles scores on the opening night were: R. Miller, 594; George Harroff, 587; Dave Rossman, 587.

The doubles and singles bowling will continue every night this week, coming to a close Friday.

Employment Service Wins Over Carroll Club, 25-20 In League Playoff Game

O. S. E. S. Qualifies To Meet Sanitary In Finals of Class A League Championship Series
Trades Class Wins Class B Tilt

Moving into the finals of a playoff for the championship of the city's Class A basketball league, the Ohio State Employment Service passed defeated the Carroll Club, 25 to 20, at the Memorial building last night.

By reason of their victory, the O. S. E. S. cagers qualified to meet the National Sanitary Wednesday night in the first game of a best two-out-of-three series for the Class A championship.

A second half spurt brought the Employment Service quintet its victory over the Carroll Club after the two teams had battled on practically even terms in the first half.

The Comets led 8 to 6 at the close of the first period, but the O. S. E. S. five rallied in the second quarter to tie the score at 14-all at halftime.

Limiting the Carroll Club to two points in the third quarter, the Employment Service scored nine points to go out in front 23 to 16. The O. S. E. S. cagers were outscored by two points in a wild fourth quarter, but managed to protect their lead.

The Comets threatened once in the fourth quarter, but after approaching within three points of tying the score they fell behind by five points in the late stages of the game.

Rudy Schuster, Eddie Pukalski and Cliff Beck led the O. S. E. S. scoring. Schuster and Pukalski counted seven points each, while Beck tallied six. The Carroll Club scoring was split among four players with Tommy Nedelka leading with six points.

The Trades Class advanced to the finals of the Class B league's round robin tournament by spanking Rudabaugh's Sohioans, 34 to 25, in one of two other games last night.

Assuming a safe lead in the first half, the Tradesmen remained out in front in the second half. Lee Shafer counted 12 points to lead the scoring.

The Trades Class will meet the Carroll Cadets in the finals of the Class B loop's round robin event.

A close 26-to-23 victory over the Episcopalians gave the Methodists the championship of the Church league's round robin tournament. The two teams staged a nip and tuck battle throughout the game, keeping the outcome in doubt right up to the final minute.

The victory over the Episcopalians earns the Methodists the right to meet the Trinity Lutherans in a playoff series for the Church league championship. The Lutherans won the league's first half race.

Training Camp Briefs

Fort Myers, Fla., March 19.—Although Bill Terry has been coaching the New York Giants in base running a lot this spring, he evidently forgot to tell his rookie pitchers what to do when the other fellow starts to run. One of the Boston Bees' tallies in their 7-4 victory at Bradenton yesterday came on a steal of home by Carvell Rowell while Rookie Jim Lynn was taking an elaborate windup. It was revealed afterwards that a couple of photographers were Boston's third-base "coaches" who suggested the steal.

Lakeland, Fla.,—Detroit's Tigers and Cincinnati's Reds, both dissatisfied with recent performances, met today in a "Grapefruit league" contest that carried hopes and fears for both. Manager Bill McKechnie warned the Reds that "anyone who fails to hustle will find himself on the bench in a hurry."

Haines City, Fla.—Sid Hudson, Washington rookie flinger, looks good but Manager Bucky Harris wants to give him another trial against major league hitting before he makes any predictions. Hudson, who won 24 games in the Florida State league last season, has turned in two fine performances against the Giants and Tigers.

San Bernardino, Calif.—Frankie Frisch continues to praise the spirit to his Pittsburgh Pirates, but he doesn't figure it can take the place of experience. He released Ace Parker to Syracuse and Floyd Young and Bill Clemensen to Albany yesterday in order to give them more experience.

Seattle, Wash.—Seattle is second only to New York as a fur market. The Seattle Fur Exchange reports. Last year the auction house sold about 750,000 raw pelts to bidders from all over the world.

Dodgers Encouraged.—ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—If Sunday's all-star game didn't prove anything, it did provide a lot of fresh enthusiasm for Brooklyn's Dodgers as a result of Luke Hamlin's and Pete Coscarra's work. The team was so full of vigor yesterday that Manager Leo Durocher forgot his lame arm and Pee-wee Reese his bad hand and both were tossing the ball around against doctors' orders.

Ruffing Satisfied.—BRADENTON, Fla.—Having tested his arm in the All-star game, Charley (Red) Ruffing of the New York Yankees is looking ahead to another good season. His arm was stiff yesterday but he reported it "felt fine" otherwise and would get stronger. The world champions met the Boston Bees today and Casey Stengel promised them a ball game although the Bees expected a comedown after three straight wins.

Padgett Reports.—ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Don Padgett, holdout catcher-outfielder, has arrived in the St. Louis Cardinals' camp and it is intimated his contract troubles may be over as soon as a meeting with General Manager Branch Rickey. It's reported here Rickey reached an agreement with Padgett before he left his Boston, N. C., home.

Wants To Stay.—FORT MYERS, Fla.—If it becomes a case of staying with the Cleveland Indians as a substitute outfielder or returning to the minors where he could play regularly, Clarence Campbell, rated "most likely to succeed" of the crop of rookie gardeners, would like to stay.

"I think well enough of myself to believe that once I get in the lineup, I'll be awfully hard to get out," he said.

MONTREAL—Montrealers wrote 28,000,000 more letters in 1939 than they did in 1938, according to postal figures released today. During last year, 182,969,530 pieces of mail were mailed in the city.

ALTHOUSE ROAD TEAM TO MEET O'NEIL QUINT

Girls' Teams To Play In Prelim On Benefit Cage Program

The Althouse Motors road team composed of leading players from the city's Class A league, face their stiffest test of the season tonight when they engage the M. O'Neil Moncos of Akron in the feature of a two-game benefit basketball program at the Memorial building.

The Motors squad will be strengthened for the important game by the addition of Herb Brown, basketball coach at Salem High school and former Ohio State star, and Bill Cope, ex-Mt. Union college ace.

Other players who are expected to perform for the Motors include Bob Jeffries, brilliant pivot man and leading scorer of the Class A league; Frank Culler, Al Carlos, Mike Linder, Paul Stratton, Gordy Scullion, Ed Jeffries, Tom Nedelka and possibly several others.

The Akron team is expected to start John Joyce and Helme Bok at guards, Dean Mealy at center and R. T. Hearn and John Mundy at forwards. Joyce is leading scorer of the team and a former Akron Hower Vocational star. Mealy, who has played in Salem before in Little City tournaments, was an All-Ohio luminary at Muskingum college.

Post 48 Wins.—The O'Neils, ranked as one of the state's outstanding amateur teams, boast a season's record of 48 wins and six losses. They have won tournaments at Barberton and Akron and finished as runner-up to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube in the district AAU eliminations.

Meeting in the preliminary to the Althouse-O'Neil game will be the Salem Saxons girls, playing under the name of the City News, and the Polish Falcon lassies of New Castle, Pa.

The New Castle girls team is recognized as one of the strongest in the mid-west, while the Salem lassies boasted an unbeaten record in the Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Saxon league.

The preliminary game will start at 7:30, followed by the feature game at 8:30.

The two games will be played as a benefit for Sammy Drabulich, captain and manager of the Althouse road and league teams, who is recovering in Salem City hospital from an operation for a rupture suffered while playing in a basketball tournament at Sebring.

Referee—Kelley (Salem).

HITLER DRAWS NEUTRAL RING

Associated Press Writer
Interprets Nazi Developments

our perspective we see that this "broadcasting" of the conference results was for several purposes, among them being:

1. To impress the world at large with the importance of this coup, especially the European neutrals which Hitler wishes to get into his fold.

2. To stimulate the morale of the people at home.
3. To try to set the Allies thinking more vigorously in terms of peace.
4. Probably to act as a smoke screen for peace suggestions—or at least information necessary to the framing of peace suggestions—which special American Ambassador Welles likely will bring back to President Roosevelt.

7 MORE BODIES ARE RECOVERED

Rescue Workers Continue
Search For Missing
Coal Miners

(By Associated Press)
ST. CLAIRSVILLE, March 19.—Rescue crews removed seven more bodies from the Willow Grove coal mine before dawn, raising to 15 the known dead from Saturday's underground explosion which entombed 71.

Six bodies were carried out at 1:30 a. m. and the seventh a few hours later. Previously six others were brought to the surface and two men died from gas fumes when they rushed into the mine without masks in a rescue attempt.

The seven were identified as: Emil Dalpiaz of Lafferty, Mike Sordula of Midway, John McFetridge of Stewartsville, Joseph Riddle of St. Clairsville, Emmet Krotzky of Neffs, Joseph Prosek and John Miketo, both of Bellaire.

W. H. McWilliams, public relations counsel for the Hanna Coal Co., owners of the mine, predicted that 17 additional bodies would be found in one chamber clogged by fallen slate.

Officials attempted to identify bodies before bringing them from the mine to avoid asking relatives of the trapped miners to view all of the victims.

Coroner C. C. Hardesty asserted that head wounds and burns caused most of the deaths.

Six bodies found yesterday were identified as Joseph Dalpiaz, George Fulton, John Marks, Ross McFadden, Constantine Daroma, and Harry Klee. Relatives identified Dalpiaz and Fulton after they previously had been identified as William Gardner and Elmer Clark.

Funeral services were to be held today for Supt. John Richards and Howard Saunders, tipple boss, who were asphyxiated entering the mine shortly after the explosion.

Company officers announced after a checkup that 184 men were in the mine when the blast occurred and that 113 came out safely.

Rescue crews exploring the explosion area found unusual effects of the blast. Part of a miner's lamp was hurled approximately 1,000 feet. Bodies were found 60 feet from where men had been working. One man was found buried under fall of rock, but one of his boots was in a nearby coal car.
